

Monitors and counselors on HIV and sexual and reproductive health: Professional training with social responsibility [Monitoresy consejeros en virus de la inmunodeficiencia humana y salud sexual y reproductiva: Formación profesional con responsabilidad social]

Cerda Muñoz L.

Ramírez Méndez A.

Aids and sexually transmitted infections (STI) are a very serious health and psychosocial problem that affect users, families and society at large, extending across all continents. The training of Students belonging to the Midwifery career at Universidad Autonoma de Chile, Talca (Chile), since 2006 as Monitors and Counselors on HIV/AIDS, STI, sexual and reproductive health, enables them to develop individual, group and community educational intervention strategies, especially in adolescents and youth, aimed at sexual health care, avoiding risky sexual behaviours, promoting self care and mutual care of all the people, establishing effective intersector coordination and fomenting social responsibility. ©2013 Ediciones Mayo, S.A. All rights reserved.

Counselors

HIV/STI

Monitors

Mutual-care

Self-care

Sexual and reproductive health acquired immune deficiency syndrome

article

high risk behavior

human

Human immunodeficiency virus

Human immunodeficiency virus infection

medical student

midwife

paramedical education

reproductive health

self care

sexual behavior

sexual health

sexually transmitted disease

social behavior