

Standards of migration protection in the inter-american human rights system [Os parâmetros de proteção das migrações no sistema interamericano de direitos humanos]

Esis I.

Paluma T.

Silva B.G.

Objective: The main objective of this article is to attest, systematize and analyze the parameters for the protection of the human rights of migrants within the framework of the Inter-American Human Rights System. Methodology: A historical, theoretical and bibliographic approach was adopted using a qualitative method and bibliographic and documentary research. The jurisprudence and advisory opinions of the Inter-American Court were used in the period from 1999 to 2018. Results: The results affirm the existence of ten protective parameters and point out that the establishment of objective criteria for the application of the parameters guides its implementation in an appropriate manner. The Court promotes the full and multidisciplinary protection of immigrants, aiming to protect them in all migratory phases, especially in situations pertinent to the American continent, such as migratory detention, documentary irregularities and the vulnerability of immigrants. Contributions: The relevance of this study is demonstrated in the context of the multidisciplinary nature of migration, in which its protection is comprehensive and includes all migratory phases: from the departure of an individual from his country of origin to the arrival in the receiving country, as well as possible cases deportation, transit or permanent stay. © 2020, Centro Universitário Curitiba - UNICURITIBA. All rights reserved.

Inter-American Court of Human Rights

International migration

Standard of protection