

A report by pedro de ribera for new Spain: Water supply to guadalajara [Un informe de pedro de ribera para nueva España: El abastecimiento de agua a guadalajara]

Mir Á.R.

The project proposed by the Franciscan architect Pedro Antonio de Buzeta to supply water to the New Spanish city of Guadalajara was sent to Madrid for review and supervision by the Council of the Indies. The Madrid architect Pedro de Ribera dealt with its technical aspects, and in 1735 he wrote an interesting critique of the plan. Among other questions, he defended the use of underground aqueducts, demonstrated his erudition and considered diverse improvements to Buzeta's project.

Aqueduct

Guadalajara

Monk pedro antonio de buzeta

New Spain

Pedro de ribera