

Application of the inter-American standards on the expulsion of aliens in the Chilean juridical system

Tolosa, R.I.D.

Abstract

The author maintains that, being the State of Chile a member of the inter-American system for the protection of human rights, and the courts of justice, organs of the State obliged to respect and promote the human rights, there should be an application of the inter-American standards that protect the rights of migrants in the judicial review of expulsion orders. Then, the article analyzes the jurisprudence of the Chilean superior courts of justice during the last 10 years to verify if this implementation has been carried out.

Author keywords

Application of international law in domestic law

Expulsions

Inter-American standard

Migrants